I Love to Tell the Story

Sometimes we sing the song “I Love to Tell the Story,” by Catherine Hankey. For those who may be wondering, it is number (659) in our song book. It is one of my favorite songs, not just because of the tune (although it does sound good) but because of the profound words it contains. In it, we sing about at least three reasons that we have to tell the story:

1. “It satisfies my longing as nothing else can do...” (v. 1). Jesus, speaking to the woman at the well, says that the living water He gives will not leave you thirsty again, but will fill you forever. The Gospel is the most satisfying story ever told, becoming in us “a spring of water welling up to eternal life” (John 4:14). Are we still looking for satisfaction from other areas of life? Have we accepted the living water from Jesus that will not leave us longing for more?

2. “It did so much for me...” (v. 2). Paul, in 1 Timothy 1, gives Timothy his personal testimony, about how he was the “foremost” among sinners, but that he received mercy. Do we ever tell others what Christ did for us? Not for “the Church,” or for “the World,” or for anyone else, but for us, individually, personally? One of the most powerful tools we have for evangelism is our own personal testimony about the love and grace of Jesus Christ. Are we using that tool?

3. “What seems, each time I tell it, more wonderfully sweet...” (v. 3). With many stories and movies and books, once you’ve experienced it, you don’t need to see it or read it ever again. I can recall many a time when trying to decide what movie to watch with my wife or some friends, the words “Nah, I’ve already seen it.” But the Gospel and the Bible are not like that. Even in my own life, when I’ve studied a passage for the second or third or fourth time, new insights and meanings are revealed that I’ve never seen before. The Gospel does not get boring with repetition, but rather becomes richer and fuller than ever.

We sing this song occasionally, and I love it when we do. It should serve as a reminder of why we tell the story, not just occasionally, but every day, and not just to those who don’t know it, but to those who’ve heard it a thousand times.

So, the question is: do you love to tell the story?

Words of Wisdom

The journey to God starts with one small step. After that it's one step at a time. He doesn't expect us to run the mile—but He promises to give us strength to live each day for Him.
